Export and Import Bank Operating Whole Year Makes Only One Loan

Export and Import Bank Operating Whole Year Makes Only One Loan

WASHINGTON — It has now been nearly one year since George Peek set up his Import-Export Bank.

Its creation was welcomed with hurrahs. Press conferences were held to explain in elaborate detail how the bank would function. Detailed studies of foreign trade were issued showing how the Import-Export Bank might restore American exports abroad.

It was proposed that the bank should grant credit to American business men wishing to finance foreign sales, also to foreign countries desiring to purchase here.

Despite all the ballyhoo, only one loan has been made. It was for $4,000,000 and went to the tiny republic of Cuba. It was negotiated, incidentally, by the State Department, not the Import-Export Bank.

Reason for this inertia is twofold. One is the fact that revival of foreign trade is a lot harder than the enthusiastic Mr. Peek and his cohorts realized. Credits alone will not do it, unless there are some prospects of those credits being paid back.

The second was a bitter clash of personalities.

Originally, the Import-Export Bank was to have gone hand-in-hand with negotiations of commercial treaties. But Cordell Hull wanted to negotiate commercial treaties himself. And he didn't want George Peek around.

So each went off into his own corner. And each has done practically nothing.

When the history of the New Deal is written, the clash of personalities will get credit for a terrific toll in errors.

Humor and Tragedy

Harry Hopkins and his Relief Administration receive about 5,000 letters a day. Probably no mail, not even that of the White House contains more pathos, more human tragedy, and yet more unconscious humor than this flow of letters.

Here are a collection of quotes recently collected:

"I am glad to say that my husband is now deceased."

"This is my eighth child. What are you going to do about it?"

"Unless I get my husband's money soon, I shall be forced to lead an immortal life."

"In accordance with your instructions I have given birth to twins in the enclosed envelope."

Economic Security

From backstage three things stand out clear and definite regarding the President's noisily ballyhooed economic security program:

1. That after months of study by a corps of experts, innumerable inner council discussions, and with Congress only six weeks distant, there is as yet no program.

2. That the only measure on which the President so far has placed his stamp of approval is unemployment insurance, and that of a limited character, confined strictly to those with jobs and able to bear a share of the cost.

3. That there is wide variance within the inner council over the scope of the proposed program, with Secretary Roper leading the conservatives in urging a cautious course, and Harry Hopkins, flatteringly supported by Miss Perkins, counselling a broad and bold policy.

To Senate Progressive leaders the realization within the last few days of the existence of this chaotic inner Administration situation has been a bitter shock.

They had taken the President at his word when he declared in his message in the closing days of the last session: "I'm looking for a sound means which I can recommend to provide at once security against several of the great disturbing factors in life—especially those which relate to unemployment and old age."

To have him now practically bar the door to everything but unemployment insurance, as he did in his brief talk to the delegates of the National Conference on Economic Security, aroused hot resentment among the liberals.

DEMOCRATS HAVE MONEY, REPORT SAYS

Adkins' Statement Shows Balance; $625.76 Spent In Campaign.

Candidates who contributed to the campaign fund of the Pickaway-co Democratic executive committee were informed today that they may receive part of their money back. After all but five bills were paid, George G. Adkins, committee chairman, reported a balance of $214.24 remained in the committee's treasury.

His report to the board of elections, filed Tuesday afternoon, said that the money would either be reserved or pro-rated among the contributing candidates.

The Democratic committee's receipts totaled $840, while expenses, not counting the five outstanding bills, were $625.76.

Contributions were made to the committee by the following candidates: August Weber, $45; Clark Hunsicker, $50; Arthur Wilder, $150; John W. Hay, $50; W. I. Spangler, $45; Mel G. Underwood, $100; Clifford M. White, $100; Marion Rowe Lutz, $50; R. G. Colville, $75; Joseph W. Adkins, $100, and Charles Radcliff, $75.

Although it has not yet done so, the Pickaway-co Democratic club was expected by the board of elections to file an expense account since it received contributions from candidates.

WILL OF MISS CRYDER LISTS BENEFICIARIES

14 to Participate in Estate With Mrs. Hosler as Administrator

VALUE IS $9,200

Isham Will Leaves Estate To Widow

Two wills in which a number of persons are named beneficiaries, and the other in which a widow is bequeathed an entire estate of $12,500 were on file in probate court today.

Mrs. Alice A. Hosler, N. Scioto-st., is named administratrix with the will annexed of the estate of her late sister, Miss Mary E. Cryder. The estate is valued at $9,200 of which $8,250 is real estate.

Miss Cryder also survived by seven nephews, one niece and three grand-nieces.

Bequests are made to the following:

$50 each to the children of the late Allen Cryder. They are Sennet, Roy, Charles, George, Robert, Fulton and Frank Cryder and Mrs. Helen Cryder Barnhart.

$200 to Mrs. Loyal Cryder, wife of Sennet Cryder.

All household goods, all chattels and the property at 597 N. Court-st to the children of her deceased niece, Bess Gray Warner. The children are Dorothy Warner Smith, Ann Arbor, Mich., and Nancy and Lenore Warner, Detroit, Mich.

The three are also to receive all her stock in the Chillicothe Paper Co.

If necessary, the will designates, the administrator may sell her share of a farm of 118.5 acres in Ross-co.

After the bequests are made Mrs. Hosler and Earl Warner, Detroit, are to share alike in the remainder of the estate.

Appraisers are G. P. Foresman, C. D. Brunner and W. G. Hamilton. The will was written June 20, 1931, and was witnessed by Charles H. May and the late Frank Hamilton.

Charles H. May is the attorney for the estate.

The estate of the late George C. Isham, of Scioto-town, who was stricken during Pumpkin show, is left in fee simple to the widow, Mrs. Mabel H. Isham. Of the $12,500 estate, $11,000 is in real estate.

J. R. Hott, Jack Philo and W. E. Hall have been appointed appraisers. The will was written Nov. 26, 1926, and witnessed by George R. and Kathryn B. Hott. J. R. and Morrison is the attorney for the estate.

Survives the widow, Mr. Isham is survived by a son, Dean, 21, of Columbus.

SLAYER SATISFIED

WITH ORDER TO DIE

WARREN, Nov. 21.—Elmer E. Martin will have his wish.

He will die in the electric chair at Ohio penitentiary next April 26.

The 34-year-old roadhouse proprietor appeared today for sentence before Judge Lynn Griffith of Trumbull county common pleas court, and startled the spectators by asking the court to prevent a new trial, or any action by the supreme court of Governor George White which would save him from the death penalty.

"No pen for me," Martin declared calmly, "I'd rather take it now, because if I got out I'd have to face trial for the Bellefonte, Pa. jail break and robbery, and after that the Penn's Grove, N. J. payroll job—it would mean jail forever."

Butzer was sentenced to life imprisonment in the Ohio penitentiary for the first degree murder of Guy Bayman, Columbus, road worker. A jury recommended mercy.

WILMINGTON GETS POWER REDUCTION

WILMINGTON, Nov. 21.—A reduced schedule of rates for residential and commercial lighting in this city will be placed in effect by the Dayton Power & Light Co. with the December meter reading and consumers will reap the first benefit in the payment of their January 1 statements.

Weiss, held for $100,000 ransom, is believed to have been abducted by underworld characters.

COUNCIL FACES DIFFICULT JOB

Finances Prove Worry To Officials; Gas May Be Discussed This Evening.

Council meets this evening with numerous important problems to be discussed and some, possibly, to be acted upon.

One councilman said today "it is about time we are doing something about the gas company." Whether action will be taken this evening is not certain.

Other matters to be taken up are the closing hours for sale of beer and liquor, the police and fireman's retirement fund, and finances. The latter question is a bug-a-boo in the city administration with the poor fund and other funds exhausted. Several branches of the city government including hospital employees are waiting until Dec. 1 for their Nov. 15 salaries.

An ordinance has been introduced and read dealing with the liquor question but as yet it has not been called to a vote.

The police and fireman's retirement fund question was aired at the last meeting with Carl C. Leist, solicitor, to study the legal steps to be taken.

"DOG-GONE STIFF" DECLARES BUTZER OF LIFE 'STRETCH'

CHILlicothe, Nov. 21.—"Pretty dog-gone stiff" was the description Charles Butzer, Londonderry, termed his sentence when asked by Judge Wilbur McKenzie if he had anything to say in court here Tuesday.

Butzer was sentenced to life imprisonment in the Ohio penitentiary for the first degree murder of Guy Bayman, Columbus, road worker. A jury recommended mercy.

The Loomis, badly damaged and in grave danger of sinking, was struggling toward Harbor Beach, Mich., with the survivors from the Franz aboard her. The Loomis was accompanied by the steamer Reiss Brothers of Sheboygan, Wis., and coast guards from the Harbor Beach station were putting out to meet the stricken ship.

Reports that the Loomis lost two men could not be confirmed.

The collision occurred in a dense fog about 3:30 a. m. The Loomis was proceeding down Lake Huron, when the Franz, a steel-hulled 3,429-ton grain ship, was enroute northward, Port Colborne, Ont., to Port Arthur, Ont., to pick up a cargo.

At 3:30 the Franz sent out a general SOS reporting a collision with a ship which was not identified.

"We are sinking rapidly," the message said. "The men are taking to the boats."

Coast guard boats put out from Middle Island and Thunder Bay stations, but no further word came from the scene of the crash, until the Reiss Brothers arrived in answer to the SOS.

The Reiss reported by radio that the Franz had gone down with four of her crew, and that the Loomis was trying to make port at Harbor Beach.

The annual rabbit supper of Howard Hall post, American Legion, will be held at 8 o'clock this evening in Memorial Hall.

'Must Aid Schools' - Bohnert

County Representative Says Distribution on Population and Tax Duplicates Not Fair To Schools and Rural Sections; County Would Get $198,123.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 21.—Opposition to the sales tax plan if it includes provision for allocation of receipts on the basis of tax duplicates and population was expressed today by Rep. Nathan C. Bohnert, of Pickaway-co.

"It must provide for a permanent schools program or I won't vote for it," said Bohnert, a Democrat.

Bohnert urged enactment of provisions that would guarantee every grade school pupil $45 and every high school student $67.50 for education.

FIGHTS FOR SCHOOLS

"The schools comprise a state problem," he insisted. "Unless a permanent program for them is assured, I won't vote for the sales tax. It must be that way—no other way."

Bohnert said that he thought such a program would be fair to both the cities and rural communities. Although, in some cases it might give more to rural districts, he said he believed such areas were entitled to a permanent program.

He pointed out that farmers spent most of their money in the cities.

"It is only fair that the rural districts have some return," was the way he expressed it.

First official estimates of how much each county would receive from the sales tax under consideration at the "lame duck" session of the legislature were disclosed today by Carlton Dargusch, chairman of the state tax commission.

As Carey arose to offer an amendment which, if accepted, would have emasculated the sales tax measure, he asserted that George V. Sheridan, head of the Ohio Council of Retail Merchants and sponsor of the bracket sales tax, "should be made a member of the 90th General Assembly" because of his activities in behalf of the bill.

Carey then submitted his amendment to exempt all foodstuffs and all wearing apparel from the sales levy. It finally was voted down, 59 to 24, but not before precipitating acrimonious debate.

"If the Carey amendment had been adopted," said Keith Lawrence, Cleveland, the Democratic floor leader, "we might as well have folded up the session and returned home."

"If the Carey amendment had been adopted," said Keith Lawrence, Cleveland, the Democratic floor leader, "we might as well have folded up the session and returned home."

SPAGHT IN FAVOR

Rep. Oakley Spaght, (D) Akron, perennial sales tax advocate, who acted as schoolmaster in explaining the intricacies of the tax measure to the special committee, warned the house before it voted down the Carey amendment that sales of foodstuffs which the Toledoan proposed to exempt, constitute 30 per cent of all retail sales.

Their exemption alone, Spaght declared, would lop off almost one-third of the $60,000,000 a general sales tax is expected to produce in Ohio. Exemption of wearing apparel would reduce the receipts by an additional large sum.

Rep. E. H. Deibel (R) Medina, tried to write in an amendment to exempt sales of all fluid milk not in cans. Rep. James Jones, Ravenna, the Republican floor leader, fought valiantly for the Deibel proposal, but it failed to carry.

"Milk producers, especially in northern Ohio, are in a precarious position," said Rep. Jones. "Canned milk is cutting in on the sale of fluid milk. As you affect the milk producer, so you affect the farmer. Adding a cent to the price of milk would be working a great hardship on the producer."

President Calls Butler's Fascist Report Fantastic

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Placed squarely on the hot spot by Gen. Smedley D. Butler's astounding testimony, Gerald P. MacQuire, an embarrassed young bond salesman, was to appear before the Dickstein committee today to repeat his denials that he ever urged Butler to march on Washington with a "Fascist" army.

Named by the fiery marine corps veteran as the intermediary in a plot of Wall street interests to overthrow President Roosevelt with a force of 500,000 ex-service men, MacQuire was to be examined on a number of circumstantial details contained in Butler's charges.

And despite the mirth, sarcasm and explosive indignation with which the charges were denied by various eminent officials mentioned in the "conspiracy," the congressional committee on un-American activities intends to "sift the matter to the bottom."

"HAS EVIDENCE"

Congressman Samuel Dickstein, vice-chairman of the committee, said:

"From present indications Butler has the evidence. He's not going to make any serious charges unless he has something to back them up. We'll have men here with bigger names than his."

"Dickstein said further that about sixteen persons mentioned by General Butler would be subpoenaed and that a public hearing might be held next Monday.

General Butler's testimony represented the high point of a career marked by such episodes as "turning in" a host who served liquor at a banquet in his honor, accusing Mussolini in the death of a baby, and being shut off on the air in the middle of a speech for dubious language.

Besides the men he mentioned in his testimony before the committee, there was a report that he had told friends in Philadelphia the dictator of the new Fascist government was to be General Hugh S. Johnson.

Ohio State Faces Pitt 11 in 1936

COLUMBUS, Nov. 21.—L. W. St. John, athletic director at Ohio State University, today had announced that the Scarlet and Gray football team will meet Pittsburgh at Ohio stadium here October 10, 1936.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

C. A. C. GYM OBTAINED

Ben Gorgon, of the Circleville Athletic club, announced Wednesday that all home basketball games of the high school will be played on the C. A. C. court—Negotiations have been completed with E. I. Gophart, faculty manager at the high school.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT

The uptown gym was used last year and provided a much better playing court than that at the school—it appears right now that the high school will have a pretty good cage team—John and Joe Jenkins, George Speakman, Fred Grant, Don Henry, Tom Kirwin, John Griffith, Bill Friley, Dick Plum and several others are bidding for positions with practice underway this week.

FOOD CONSUMED

The "Up and At Them" hunting club, G. I. Nickerson president, enjoyed a real game feed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew "Hank" Thomas, S. Washington-st. Tuesday evening—Rabbit and pheasant were served by Mrs. Thomas. The guests were the president, William "Sherlock" McCrady, Walter "Dead-eye" Nelson, and George "Sureshot" Roof.

FIVE FROM COUNTY

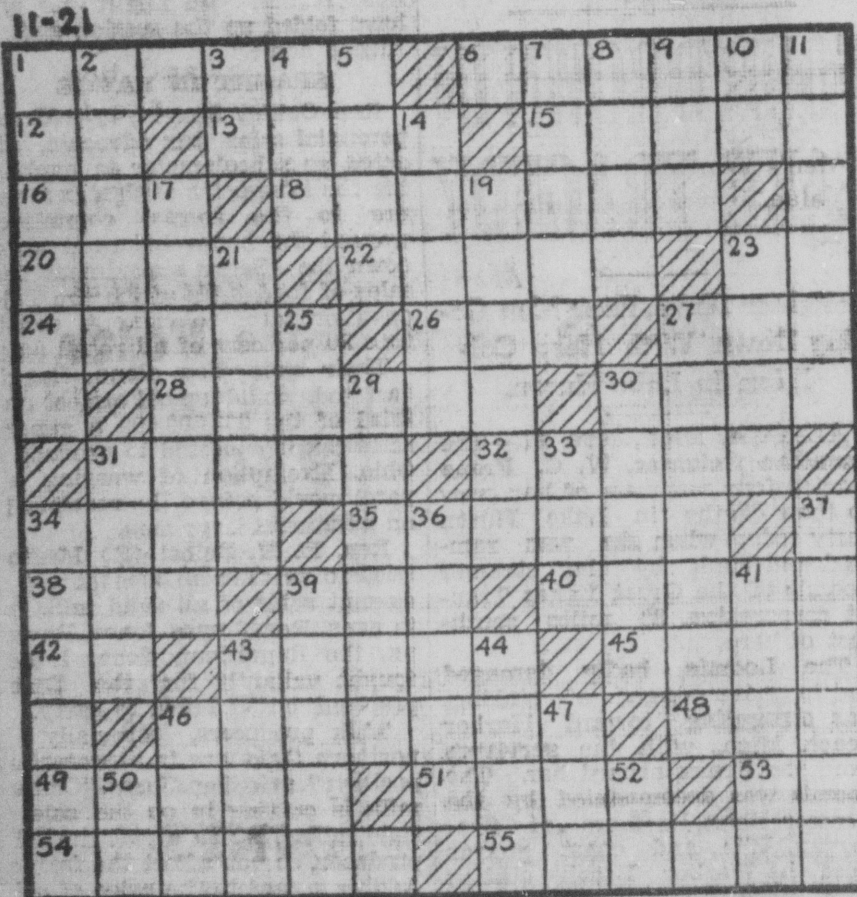

The official program book for the Ohio State-Michigan game last week listed two Circleville and three Pickaway-co men—They were Max Friedman, football, 1919; Leon A. Friedman, football, 1916-17-18-19; John H. Dunlap, Sr., football, 1895; Kenick W. Dunlap, football, 1891; and Nelson H. Dunlap son of the latter, football, 1921-22-23. All are in the Varsity 'O' section comprised only of letter-men.

Match Ohio U., Wesleyan After Many Year Rivalry

ATHENS, Nov. 21.—Two well matched teams, whetted with an intense rivalry that has come down through the years of modern football, will clash at Delaware this Saturday when the raging Bishops of Ohio Wesleyan stalk the precarious Bobcats of Ohio University.

It was the Saturday before Thanksgiving a decade ago when these two teams met in circumstances strikingly similar to the foray staggered through a very mediocre season and had come up to the Wesleyan game with little hopes of closing the season with a victory over the undefeated Bishop eleven. Wesleyan needed only this last victory to tie with Oberlin for the Ohio Conference championship.

In a delicious game upon which the elements seemed to frown with rain, sleet, snow, and a strong variable wind that made play difficult, the Bobcats nosed out the Bishops when Wise, Ohio end, intercepted a pass in the second quarter and ran sixty yards for a touchdown.

This year Ohio is again having a lean campaign after several successful seasons, while the Bishops boast one of their strongest teams in years. It has been six autumns since a Delaware team has beaten the Athenians and they believe that next Saturday is their day, while the Ohio followers say remember 1924.

In the last three games this year Ohio has shown a decided improvement. In downing Dayton the team showed the alert driving football that has been lacking in a Peden team for the first time in years this fall. Their defense has been almost impregnable and with the finding of their offensive punch a repetition of that game in '24 is a very real possibility. In the 17 games played between Wesleyan and Ohio since the advent of modern football, Ohio has won 7, as have the Bishops, with 3 ending in 0-0 ties. In points the records are very close with the Bishops having scored 138 to Ohio's 127.

You know, you can make them in one evening—each toy is made of but two pieces with just the ears extra, so what could be easier? Do them in a gay print—any youngster would like that! Anyone of these would be quite in place under the

FACTS ABOUT SALES TAXES ARE RELATED

Questions, Answers Disclosed As Plan is Given Thorough Study by Reporter.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 21.—Here are the answers to vital questions about the new 3 per cent bracket sales tax under consideration today by the Ohio legislature.

1. How much revenue would it produce annually?
A. $60,000,000 according to tax commission estimates.

2. When would it go into effect?
A. On January 1, 1935.

3. How much tax would the consumer pay?
A. On a sale of 1 cent to 8 cents, inclusive, he would pay no tax; on a sale of 9 cents to 40 cents, inclusive, he would pay 1 cent tax; on a sale of 41 cents to 70 cents, he would pay 2 cents tax, and on a sale of 70 cents to $1, he would pay 3 cents tax. The tax on a $1.05 sale would be 4 cents.

4. If eggs sold at 24 cents a dozen, could you evade the sales tax by making 12 separate purchases at 2 cents each?
A. Yes, but the sales tax sponsors say you would soon tire of such practice and elect to pay the 1 cent tax.

5. How would the tax be paid when an article was bought on the installment plan?
A. Full amount of the tax would have to be paid with the first installment. If after several installments were paid, you returned the article to the dealer, he would refund the tax and would be reimbursed by applying to the state tax commission.

6. Would any sales be exempt from payment of the tax?
A. Yes. Exemptions include all articles produced on a farm and sold by the farmer; all motor vehicle fuel, liquor, cigarettes and other articles already taxed by the state; all public utility products, such as gas, electricity and water. If you bought a new stove and decided to sell the old one to a neighbor, the sales tax would not be collected because you are not a dealer.

7. How would the tax be collected?
A. Every retail merchant in the state would be licensed, by paying a $1 fee to his county treasurer. He would then be entitled to purchase sales tax coupons either from the county or state treasurer in 1 cent and other small denominations.

8. These coupons the merchant would keep near his cash drawer. When you bought a 10-cent article, for example, he would tear in two parts in your presence, a 1-cent tax coupon, giving you half and retaining half. Destroying the coupon would complete your payment of the tax, collected in advance by the state from the merchant.

9. If you return an article to a store will the amount of tax paid be refunded?
A. Yes, and by making a sworn statement of the gross amount of such refunds to the tax commission, the merchants will be reimbursed.

10. How will a merchant know how many sales tax coupons to of this, he barked: "He'd better be pretty damn careful. Nobody said a word to me about anything of this kind, and if they did I'd throw them out of the window. I know nothing about it."

"FANTASTIC!"—F. D. R.

There was no official comment from President Roosevelt, who is in Warm Springs, Ga., but it is known that when he heard of the "conspiracy" which was to relieve him of his job he laughed: "Fantastic!"

In Washington the charges were at first greeted with derision, but as the scope of the testimony became known officials of the war department belied with anger.

The substance of Butler's charges was substantially: That MacGuire, employee of the financial firm of Grayson M. P. Murphy, 52 Broadway, had asked him to organize war veterans into a Fascist army with dues of $1 a year.

That MacGuire arranged a meeting between Robert Sterling Clark, financier, regarding a speech urging that America remain in the gold standard—a speech which it was hoped Butler would deliver before the Chicago American Legion convention. That if Butler rejected the offer to lead the Fascist army the command would be offered to general Douglas MacArthur, army chief of staff, or to Hanford MacNider, former national commander of the American Legion.

According to Butler's testimony as made public, it was hoped that President Roosevelt would "go along" as the King of Italy did with Mussolini. And if he did not and the vice-president would be forced to resign after appointing a new secretary of state, who would become "dictator."

Butler was also quoted as saying that MacGuire had tossed $18,000 in 18 bills on the bed of the general's room in a Newark hotel to "pay his expenses" in Chicago if he agreed to make the "gold standard" speech.

BRIDGE CLUB MEETS AT COFFEE SHOP

Members of one of the Tuesday night bridge clubs met at the American Hotel Coffee shop, last evening, for an interesting game.

Two tables of cards were assembled and high score favors went to Miss Ethel Kirchofer and Miss Mary Ellen Phillips. Refreshments were served at the close of play.

In two weeks Mrs. Wendell Boyer, Watt-st., will entertain the club.

Mrs. W. C. Krebs, Mrs. Theodore Hess and Mrs. Charles Jollery, of Columbus, visited Tuesday with Mrs. Elizabeth Funk, S. Clinton-st.

At the conclusion of the business meeting Miss June West played a piano solo, "Rustle of Spring" by Christian Sinding.

The paper for this program, "Saddlebags" was read by Mrs. William Ulm. Mrs. Ulm's account of the days of the 'Saddlebags' was most interesting and instructive. She told of the many dangerous experiences that the men in the saddles underwent in their attempts to carry the United States mail during the early eighties.

The mail must go through, only then trips on horseback lasted weeks in comparison to the hours the same trip would take today.

This was the second paper this year on the theme "Transportation," the first one "Indian Trails" was read by Mrs. H. O. Pile at the October meeting. Other papers on the theme, "Transportation," will follow later in the year.

Two new members, Mrs. Walter Kindler and Mrs. C. D. Closson, were welcomed into the chapter.

Mrs. James Patton, East Orange, N. J., a sister of Mrs. Clark Hunsicker, was a guest at this meeting and at the conclusion of the program spoke briefly of the D. A. R. work in New Jersey. Mrs. Patton was former regent of a Columbus chapter D. A. R.

Following the program a delicious lunch was served by the hostess with Mrs. Harry Dunlap and Mrs. George Hunsicker presiding at a beautifully appointed tea table.

3 CHILDREN DEAD IN FIRE

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 21—

Three children were burned to death today and their mother suffered a fractured leg and burns when she jumped from a second story window in rescuing a fourth child from fire of undetermined origin in the home of Charles Smith.

The dead: Chandler Smith, 5, Eugene 4, and Leonard, 10-weeks old.

Mrs. Hilda Smith, who with her husband, was awakened by the blaze, leaped with her son Charles, 2, from a second story window. Meanwhile her husband rushed from the house to spread the alarm.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Smith and their son Charles, were removed to Cambridge Municipal hospital where Mrs. Smith was found to be suffering from second and third degree burns. Her husband also was treated for burns, while baby Charles had his hair singed, and face lacerations.

HOLC An Omen

ANNOUNCEMENT that the Home Owners' Loan Corporation will accept no more applications for refinancing mortgages will disappoint thousands, but must be taken as an omen of happiness by millions. It means that the peak of the necessity has passed and that the government believes private earnings can begin to take care of private obligations through private financial agencies.

Were not the government convinced of this, HOLC would not be terminated. It was one of the most successful of the New Deal agencies to aid directly a depression-stricken people. It is a self-liquidating system, entailing no loss of public funds except the inevitable percentage of bad debts which can almost be mathematically computed. Had the necessity for HOLC persisted there is no question that it would have been perpetuated. In actual accomplishment it will have saved over a million homes to their nominal owners. That invites opinion more sentimental than practical, but the wholesome effect on the real estate market alone, including land values and buildings, by keeping these properties off the distress market can be translated into the billions of dollars.

First of the New Deal agencies to announce its job finished and the return to normal, privately managed agencies of the responsibilities it shouldered in the emergency, HOLC can be rated as a social asset in the nation's rehabilitation.

Other agencies will inevitably follow HOLC into history, with varying records to be sure. That the parade has started is one of the best signs that the apathy of the depression is going from our people.

The average life of a horse is 12 years, due somewhat to the fact that he does not travel at 80 miles an hour on a wet highway.

Regulating Arms Traffic

SECRETARY Hull's proposal for international control of the arms traffic is both depressing and inspiring. It is depressing to the extent that it is admission of the poor prospects for a general disarmament agreement; inspiring because it is a change for the good in the policy this country followed for nearly a decade, and for that reason stands a good chance of being adopted. It was not until last June that the senate ratified the 1925 convention. In the interim the United States was pointed to as the obstacle to such a convention.

Another promise of success may be found in Britain's apparent readiness to co-operate. It seems more than a coincidence that Prime Minister MacDonald and Secretary Hull simultaneously came out wholeheartedly for the project. Beyond doubt the investigation of the arms traffic has been an inspiration. Enough of a shocking nature has been brought out to create a powerful sentiment for putting this traffic under strict control.

With the adoption of a new policy, Washington goes whole hog. The Hull proposal is more far-reaching than the 1925 convention, which dealt only with the distribution of arms. When President Roosevelt urged ratification of that convention last Spring, he hoped for a broader convention such as Mr. Hull suggests.

Farley now says the postoffice department has found it can spend the money and will continue three-cent postage. So it was an election promise, Jim?

CAROLINE by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

SYNOPSIS

Caroline Rutledge and Howard Dunsword became engaged despite the opposition of their fathers, Philip Rutledge and Henry Dunsword, who have been enemies for years. Then Henry ruins Philip in business and Caroline breaks her engagement when it is obvious that money means more to Howard than love. He explained he would be disinherited if they married and now that Caroline had no money, he did not see how they could marry. The Rutledges leave "Hawage," their luxurious home, and go to live in a poor section of town. Alva, Caroline's mother, collapses from shock and fatigue. Their neighbors, Malcolm Stuart and his mother, come to the family's assistance. Malcolm is an inspector at the Rutledge factory. Though Philip, himself, is helpless in their adversity and leaves the burden on Caroline's shoulders, he nobly represents the idea of accepting aid from "these people" as he terms the Stuarts. One day, Philip warns Caroline: "You must be careful of that Stuart boy, my dear. It's quite possible that he would be presumptuous enough to fall in love with you." Caroline tells Malcolm not to mind her father for he never thought any boy was the right one for her, adding: "I shouldn't want you to fall in love with me because I couldn't return it." Their eyes meet. Caroline's girl for Malcolm prevented her from realizing how perfect had been the fusion of their minds in that one glance. Never had there been between her and Howard one moment so electric and breathless as this.

CHAPTER XIV

There was no party at the Rutledge house that night. And by twelve o'clock the next day Caroline had not seen Malcolm since he walked out of her kitchen with his tools in his hand and trouble in his eyes.

Concern for him wiped out all other thoughts from her mind. At noon she saw him leaving his home on his motorcycle and felt relieved that he was away. She could go now and plan the landscaping of the back yard without chancing a meeting with him. She wanted to avoid him.

The back yard had been an eyesore to her. But it was well fenced in and she knew she could make a charming spot of it in time. "This year," she said to herself as she stood surveying its barrenness, "we'll brighten it up with nasturtiums and get our backgrounds with castor-oil plants, and flowering vines, but next year . . ."

She induced her mother to come outdoors with her and tried to interest her in planning the garden. But Mrs. Rutledge was too depressed to see only in her mind the lovely gardens at Hawthorn House. Caroline would not be discouraged. She spent the rest of the day drawing sketches and poring over seed catalogues that she got from Mrs. Stuart.

The Stuarts had a pretty place. "All Malcolm's doing," her mother declared, "I'm sure he'll let you have all the cuttings you want."

It was not until the following morning when she thought with a pang: "This is the day of the sale," that Caroline remembered she had not gone for her Currier and Ives prints.

"If you're going to town this morning," she said to her father at breakfast, "I'll drop you off. I'm going on to Hawthorn House to get something I left there."

They did not start, however, until the afternoon. The sedan developed a mysterious trouble which required several hours for a mechanic to locate and correct.

Caroline arrived at Hawthorn House while the sale was in progress. She entered, unrecognized, by a side door. To reach the main stairs she was compelled to go through the library. The doors of all the rooms were thrown wide open. People roamed about through the spacious house as though it were a museum. Caroline could hear the auctioneer's voice in the drawing room. It was like a challenge to her. She paused, a hand on the mahogany newel. Hot resentment fired against her father, her mother, herself, that in a week they had done nothing, had known nothing to do, to save these fine old things that could belong to no one else in the world as they belonged to the Rutledges. Her Grandfather Rutledge had said they were like some family bibles. In the scars and worn places could be read a record of the activities of the family; in the patina of the furniture and the mellowness of the furnishings, its grace and culture.

Into Caroline's line of vision as she stood there listening came a girl in a bright red sports suit. The girl had fair hair set in tight curls that framed a spec of a hat with a pom-pom at its apex. Her eyes at a distance looked enormously large and dark, due to artificial eyelashes. Her health-revealing cheeks were pale as white powder could make them, but her lips were vivid, the exact shade of her costume, as, in fact, were her finger nails. She was not tall, but she was shapely in a sturdy, wholesome style.

Caroline knew her. Everyone knew her, knew that she had been christened Minnie and had changed the name to Gwendolyn. This change was typical of her. Caroline had heard other girls say she had delusions of grandeur.

Her parents were very well to do, but plain and substantial citizens, into whom Gwendolyn was constantly trying to inject greater social ambitions. Papa Hoffmann did not belong to the Country Club, the Squash and Racquet Club, the Rod and Gun, as she would like him to. But he was known and respected by many of the men she would have him emulate.

Gwendolyn wanted to forget his start in business as a grocery clerk. It was her wish to fade out the family background of foodstuffs and replace it with one filled with a hurriedly-grown genealogical tree emblazoned with time-misted crests and impressive coats of arms.

Regarding with amusement for her pretensions by the elite of the town she was, nevertheless, accepted by them to a limited extent. Her donations to their charities and her interest in their Junior League activities were welcomed, but she was left out of the intimate little parties attended only by those of the innermost circle of the society to which she aspired.

Of this circle Caroline was leader. Gwendolyn envied her, hated her because she believed that Caroline had turned thumbs down on her.

And now she was buying Caroline's pet pictures—her treasured Currier and Ives!

Caroline saw one of the pictures in Gwendolyn's hands, saw her put it down on a table where the others lay. Instinctively she moved toward the drawing room. Gwendolyn was speaking to her companion, a girl Caroline scarcely knew. Her voice was raised, as Caroline drew near she heard her say: "And I'm going to have these. Aren't they delicious? I brought them down myself from her bedroom. The auctioneer's going to sell them with the stuff down here so I won't have to wait around."

Wait around! In a house that had never before been open to her! Caroline's eyes blazed. Her indignation appeared to make itself felt by the other two girls. They looked at her. Gwendolyn hesitated, then exclaimed coolly, "Oh, good afternoon, Miss Rutledge. I didn't expect to see you here. It . . . well," she interrupted herself with a giggly laugh, ". . . it must be terribly hard for you. I mean, losing just everything."

Caroline's indignation turned to an icy anger. "Really?" she said with an insolent drawl. "Your presence is a surprise to me, too, Miss Hoffmann. I had no idea you could possibly care for old family possessions such as ours." She smiled and moved on, making her way through the throng the auctioneer was haranguing, to his side.

"Just to this side," she said laughingly when he paused at sight of her there. "I am sorry to interrupt but there are some pictures here that I do not wish sold. Have you a man about to carry them out to my car? I'm Miss Rutledge, I think you know."

"Yes, yes, sure, Miss Rutledge, I know you. But can't the matter wait? I don't like to stop right now . . ."

"The pictures belonged upstairs," Caroline said coolly. "I came in time to have them taken off the list. But they have been brought down here—through some glittering persuasion, I dare say. But they are not to be sold. They are my personal property. If you have no one to carry them away for me I shall take them myself."

Someone shoved at her elbow. It was Gwendolyn, her eyes bright with ire as Caroline's had been. "You can't let those pictures go!" she fired at the auctioneer. "I've practically bought them, you know that. You promised to put them up right after you'd sold that old square piano."

"Please, Miss Hoffmann . . ." the auctioneer began placatingly . . . "just a moment."

"Well, is this a sale, or isn't it?" Gwendolyn demanded. "I spent a lot of time picking out those pictures and I offered to buy them outright. I think you should want to make me bid on them to boost your old auction. And you're not going to hand them over to anyone else now."

"But, Miss Hoffmann, this is not a forced sale," the harassed man reminded her. "I'll see what can be done."

Caroline felt a second, but lighter, contact on her elbow. She turned quickly and saw that a group of her friends who she had not known were there surrounded her. "Shall we give her the bum's rush?" one of them whispered to her. "Come on, Caro," another urged, "she's sunk. We've got the pictures outside."

Caroline slipped away with them while the auctioneer continued to argue with Gwendolyn.

"Where's your car?" some one outside asked her. "The pictures are under a bush near the drive. We sneaked them while everyone was rushing for ringside seats to see you and dear Gwendolyn mix it."

Caroline forgot they had never seen the sedan. When she led them to it they frankly spoke their minds about it. And with one voice all demanded to be driven places in it. Caroline could not refuse. Besides, their light-hearted remarks were good medicine for her. She felt cheerier than she had for over a week.

As they climbed in the young man with the pictures in his arms said: "I'm tired. I'll hold these babies. They don't look so hot to me."

"They weren't hot to Gwendolyn either," one of the girls remarked. "She wouldn't have wanted them if she hadn't heard someone say it was funny they were there, because Caroline was crazy about them."

"She probably wanted to hang them on the family tree and say they were ancestors," another girl opined.

"Who did before they grew up," a third added.

"Yeah?" the cynic among them drawled. "She may be dizzy, but I'll lay a hundred to one she walks off with the best man."

"Taken," a girl agreed. "A hundred to one what?"

"You know."

"From. Let's take him out to the club, Caroline, and practice drives off his beam. He'll never be missed."

"Honey, if it's you with the club I never will be."

"I was thinking of your demise sweetheart, but you're right too."

The country club was an idea—Caroline found herself heading toward it. It so happened that of the group all but the girl who had suggested going to the club were out of town students who had cut classes to attend the sale at Hawthorn House. "For the express purpose of lending moral support, since we positively haven't a red copper amongst us," one of them had assured her. None of them, the local girl included, was related to a member of the club. Mr. Rutledge's generosity usually had covered the hospitality afforded Caroline's friends there. She had not thought now other than to reward these five for their loyalty. A week is a short time in which to learn to be poor.

It seemed to her, with their laughter and jokes to lift her spirits, something in the nature of a lark to drive to the swanky club in the noisy car. But the lark soon turned into a dreary piece of realism.

AT THE GRAND

"Return of the Terror," a real mystery, is the picture at the Grand Theatre Wednesday and Thursday. Mary Astor, John Halliday, Lyle Talbot and Frank McHugh are starred.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Drama, pathos, human interest, and a fair sprinkling of wholesome humor—all these are to be found in the new picture, "Straight Is the Way" which opens tonight at the Cliftona Theatre.

It is a story that requires the services of finished actors, for it is the gripping drama of the travails of one of New York's East Side families—and of the problems of life and love that entangle a returned ex-convict who is determined to keep to the straight and narrow path.

Franchot Tone tops the cast with his portrayal of Benny, the boy just out of prison. It is an entirely new characterization for Tone one proving his ability to handle difficult dramatic roles, and should boost him a notch higher toward stardom.

May Robson, Karen Morley, Gladys George and Jack LaRue have powerful supporting roles.

Cleveland Man to Head Commerce Department

COLUMBUS, Nov. 21.—The important portfolio of state commerce director in the cabinet of Gov.-elect Martin L. Davey went today to Alfred A. Benesch, president of the Cleveland board of education.

As described by Davey, Benesch is "a sound lawyer, a fine gentleman and a citizen of the first rank, who, aside from his ability, has an irreproachable character and is socially minded."

Benesch telegraphed Davey his acceptance of the post which will bring under his management approximately one half billion dollars belonging to depositors in closed banks and building and loan associations in Ohio.

"With grateful appreciation of your confidence and a reverent sense of responsibility, I accept the office," the Benesch telegram stated.

NOVEMBER 21

1789—North Carolina ratified the Constitution, became the 12th state.

1852—French people voted for restoration of the empire, with Napoleon III as emperor.

1894—Japanese captured Port Arthur. Chinese charged that most of population was massacred in cold blood.

1906—Ernest Nathan, a Jew, elected mayor of Rome.

1916—Britannic, Britain's largest steamship, was sunk off coast of Greece.

1916—Francis Joseph, emperor of Austria and King of Hungary, died.

1922—Mrs. Rebecca Felton took seat as first woman member of U. S. Senate.

1933—Lieut. Comdr T. G. Settle, U. S. N., and Maj. C. L. Fordney, U. S. M. C., who took off from Akron, O., in a stratosphere balloon, were found to have descended in a bog near Bridgeton, N. J., with a record of 61,237 feet. (Took off 20th.)

20-YEAR LOW HIT IN HOG SUPPLIES

Material Increase in Numbers Not Expected Until 1936-1937 Season.

Supplies of hogs for commercial slaughter during the marketing year, which began in October, are expected to be the smallest in more than 20 years.

The 1934 spring pig crop was 28 per cent smaller than the 1933 crop. And according to economists of the department of rural economics, Ohio State University, it is not improbable that the December pig survey may show from 38 to 50 per cent reduction in farrowings, owing to the influence of greatly reduced stocks of corn.

The combined spring and fall crop of 1934 is expected to total 55 million head, which compares to 81 million head in the years 1931 and 1932.

Material increases in hog slaughter are not expected to occur until the marketing year of 1936-37. Declining feed prices and the favorable crop prospects in the last half of 1935 may encourage fall breeding for 1936 spring farrowing.

Storage stock of pork and lard, enormously large a year ago, have been moving out of storage at a fast pace and are now below the normal quantity stored at this season of the year.

Present indications, say the economists, point to a reasonably well maintained domestic demand for meats during 1935. Improvement in consumer demand depends upon further improvement in industry.

Although pork exports in the year ending September 30 were 20 per cent larger than exports during the previous year, recent developments in Britain and Germany point to smaller exports to these countries in 1935. German commercial policies practically eliminated that country as a customer for American lard, and stricter British import quotas further curtail prospective demand from that country.

Hog prices in the 1934-35 marketing season are expected to be materially higher than prices which prevailed during the past three marketing years.

Surveys show not one home in ten is adequately lighted

Has Your Home Enough Light to Protect EYES?

Don't neglect one of the most important things in your home when you remodel or repair... and that is proper lighting fixtures. Science now tells us that constant reading or working in inadequate light is one of the surest ways to damage eyes. The reason many children become near-sighted is that they study in poor light. And not one modern home in ten provides enough light for effortless seeing without eye strain.

Let our representative call on you and measure the light in your home. There is no obligation on your part for this service.

Modernize Your Home Now With a Federal Housing Loan

IMPROVED HOUSING IS HELP TO HEALTH PTA HEAD STATES

"The Better Housing Program sponsored by the Federal Housing Administration should be understood by every family in America. Once understood, it will be utilized to build better lives, make large living quarters, and make places for children to play at home instead of on the streets."

Thus does Mrs. B. F. Longworth, of Chicago, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, view the effects of the National Housing Act.

"The Better Housing Program is a civic movement and should be supported as such," she says. "The house is closely related to the health of the family. Sleeping porches should be a part of every house in this country."

"All the unhealthful, unsanitary living conditions are not found among the poor. Some of the affluent families live in gilded slums insofar as they provide recreation and room enough for their children to grow. They have Queen Anne fronts and Mary Ann backs. These are the people who can build playrooms and recreation rooms or at least enlarge the living rooms so that the family have a feeling of freedom."

"Our ideal is: Homes where the child may feel free; where he is well fed; where he has room for his own belongings; where he can study in quiet; where the hours of home activities are regular and unhurried and from which he goes every day with a sense of loving care and adventure. Proper material surroundings are essential to realizing this ideal."

NEGLECT TO REPAIR MAKES COST HEAVY

Deterioration and Obsolescence Important point in Maintenance.

While property ownership is a very stable and attractive investment, two serious items must be kept in mind, according to G. J. DeGelleke, director of the Central States Division of the American Institute of Architects. They are:

1. Depreciation, due to the wearing out of the buildings, which reduces their values.

2. Obsolescence, due to buildings not meeting the requirements of the times and therefore not producing reasonable income.

"Neglecting repairs results in an accumulation of expense which is a great deal larger than the cost of repairs as required from time to time," Mr. DeGelleke says. "In some cases it necessitates reconstructing parts of the buildings."

"The condition of buildings have a great effect upon the people who occupy them and when well taken care of, create more healthful conditions, more confidence and contentment, strengthen ideals, and intensify interest in homes. Thus will be developed better citizens physically, mentally and morally."

"People are affected by the condition of the buildings they occupy fully as much as they are by the clothes they wear, their associates and their manner of life."

The National Housing Act, Mr. DeGelleke declared, provides the ways and means for owners of property to save the values of their investments, and while benefiting themselves they also provide work and income for a great body of their fellow men.

CLOTHE HOME IN WINTER OVERCOAT

A new overcoat may be all the old house needs to keep it warm this winter. The comfort, of the home, as well as its appearance, will necessarily improve with the addition of one of the many effective siding materials over the old siding.

Brick, brick veneer, stucco, stone, clapboards, shingles and other products, when applied on top of the old siding, provide additional insulation. Not only is there a new surface to keep the cold out, but a dead-air chamber is formed between the two sidings, and this space is greatly effective in retaining the heat inside and preventing the outside cold from entering. It operates to the contrary in the summer, repelling the heat rays and facilitating the cooling of the rooms inside.

When shingles and clapboards are applied to masonry or stucco, wooden strips are first applied, horizontally for shingles and vertically for clapboards. The strips are placed equal to the weather exposure at which the shingles or clapboards are to be laid.

It is necessary, when overcoat-

parting strips and pulley stiles also fit tightly. Wherever cracks are found, nail the woodwork firmly and fill in remaining cracks with whitelead putty or caulking compound. If seepage continues after these things have been done, it may be stopped by removing the lower sash and ploughing a furrow or groove along the bottom of the lower drain from one side to the other, forming a cavity that will check the flow before it gets inside the window.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Export and Import Bank
Operating Whole Loan
Makes Only One Year

WASHINGTON — It has now been nearly one year since George Peck set up his Import-Export Bank.

Its creation was welcomed with enthusiasm. Press conferences were held to explain in elaborate detail how the bank would function. Detailed studies of foreign trade were issued showing how the Import-Export Bank might restore American exports abroad.

It was proposed that the bank should grant credit to American business men wishing to finance foreign sales, also to foreign countries desiring to purchase here.

Despite all the ballyhoo, only one loan has been made. It was for $4,000,000 and went to the tiny republic of Cuba. It was negotiated, incidentally, by the State Department, not the Import-Export Bank.

Reason for this inertia is twofold. One is the fact that revival of foreign trade is a lot harder than the enthusiastic Mr. Peck and his cohorts realized. Credits alone will not do it, unless there are some prospects of those credits being paid back.

The second was a bitter clash of personalities. Originally, the Import-Export Bank was to have gone hand-in-hand with negotiations of commercial treaties. But Cordell Hull wanted to negotiate commercial treaties himself. And he didn't want George Peck around.

So each went off into his own corner. And each has done practically nothing.

When the history of the New Deal is written, the clash of personalities will get credit for a terrific toll in errors.

Humor and Tragedy

Harry Hopkins and his Relief Administration receive about 5,000 letters a day. Probably no mail, not even that of the White House contains more pathos, more human tragedy, and yet more unconscious humor than this flow of letters.

Here are a collection of quotes recently collected.

"I am glad to say that my husband is now deceased."

"This is my eighth child. What are you going to do about it?"

"Unless I get my husband's money soon, I shall be forced to lead an immortal life."

"In accordance with your instructions I have given birth to twins in the enclosed envelope."

Economic Security

From backstage three things stand out clear and definite regarding the President's newly launched economic security program:

1. That after months of study by a corps of experts, innumerable inner council discussions, and with Congress only six weeks distant, there is as yet no program.

2. That the only measure on which the President so far has placed his stamp of approval is unemployment insurance, and that of a limited character, confined strictly to those with jobs and able to bear a share of the cost.

3. That there is wide variance within the inner council over the scope of the proposed program, with Secretary Roper leading the conservatives in urging a cautious course, and Harry Hopkins, flatteringly supported by Miss Perkins, counselling a broad and bold policy.

To Senate Progressive leaders the realization within the last few days of the existence of this chaotic inner Administration situation has been a bitter shock.

They had taken the President at his word when he declared in his message in the closing days of the last session: "I am looking for a sound means which I can recommend to provide at once security against several of the great disturbing factors in life—especially those which relate to unemployment and old age."

To have him now practically bar the door to everything but unemployment insurance, as he did in his brief talk to the delegates of the National Conference on Economic Security, aroused hot resentment among the liberals.

The announcement that Hanefeld would be retained in his present administration when Davey assumes office the first of next year was the second major appointment to the incoming executive's "official family."

NAMED RENESCH

Last night, Governor-elect Davey announced that Alfred A. Benesch, president of the Cleveland Board of Education, had been proffered and had accepted appointment as director of commerce succeeding Theodore Tangeman who intends to retire to private life.

"Mr. Hanefeld has performed his duties in a most commendable manner," the governor-elect said in announcing the re-appointment of the director of agriculture.

"He is intelligent, honorable and loyal. He has a fine spirit of co-operation, not only with his associates but toward all the interests with which he is required to deal."

Davey took occasion also to reiterate that it is his intention to build his "official family" from the "highest type person who is available." He added that announcements concerning other important appointments would be made as rapidly as possible in the course of the next few days after which he intends to go away for an "extended rest."

DEMOCRATS HAVE MONEY, REPORT SAYS

Adkins' Statement Shows Balance; $625.76 Spent In Campaign.

Candidates who contributed to the campaign fund of the Pickaway-co Democratic executive committee were informed today that they may receive part of their money back. After all but five bills were paid, George G. Adkins, committee chairman, reported a balance of $214.24 remained in the committee's treasury.

His report to the board of elections, filed Tuesday afternoon, said that the money would either be reserved or pro-rated among the contributing candidates.

The Democratic committee's receipts totaled $840, while expenditures, not counting the five outstanding bills, were $625.76.

Contributions were made to the committee by the following candidates: August Weber, $45; Clark Hunsicker, $50; Arthur Wilder, $150; John W. Hay, $50; W. I. Spangler, $45; Mell G. Underwood, $100; Clifford M. White, $100; Marion Rowe Lutz, $50; R. G. Colville, $75; Joseph W. Adkins, $100, and Charles Radcliff, $75.

Although it has not yet done so, the Pickaway-co Democratic club was expected by the board of elections to file an expense account since it received contributions from candidates.

President Calls Butler's Fascist Report Fantastic

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Placed squarely on the hot spot by General Smedley D. Butler's astounding testimony, Gerald P. MacQuire, an embarrassed young bond salesman, was to appear before the Dickstein committee today to repeat his denials that he ever urged Butler to march on Washington with a "Fascist" army.

Named by the fiery marine corps veteran as the intermediary in a plot of Wall street interests to overthrow President Roosevelt with a force of 500,000 ex-servicemen, MacQuire was to be examined on a number of circumstantial details contained in Butler's charges.

And despite the mirth, sarcasm and explosive indignation which the charges were denied by various eminent officials mentioned in the "conspiracy," the congressional committee on the American matter to the bottom, "sift the evidence."

WILL OF MISS CRYDER LISTS BENEFICIARIES

14 to Participate in Estate With Mrs. Hosler as Administrator

VALUE IS $9,200

Isham Will Leaves Estate To Widow

Two wills in which a number of persons are named beneficiaries, and the other in which a widow is bequeathed an entire estate of $12,500 were on file in probate court today.

Mrs. Alice A. Hosler, N. Scioto-st., is named administratrix with the will annexed of the estate of her late sister, Miss Mary E. Cryder. The estate is valued at $9,200 of which $8,250 is real estate.

Miss Cryder is also survived by seven nephews, one niece and three grand-nieces.

Bequests are made to the following: $50 each to the children of the late Allen Cryder. They are Sennet, Roy, Charles, George, Robert, Fulton and Frank Cryder and Mrs. Helen Cryder Barnhart.

$200 to Mrs. Lyall Cryder, wife of Sennet Cryder.

All household goods, all chattels and the property at 597 N. Court-st. to the children of her deceased niece, Bess Gray Warner. The children are Dorothy, Warner Smith, Ann Arbor, Mich., and Nancy and Lenore Warner, Detroit, Mich.

The three are also to receive all her stock in the Chillicothe Paper Co.

If necessary, the will designates, the administrator may sell her share of a farm of 118.5 acres in Ross-co.

After the bequests are made Mrs. Hosler and Earl Warner, Detroit, are to share alike in the remainder of the estate.

Appraisers are C. P. Foreman, C. D. Brunner and W. G. Hamilton. The will was written June 20, 1931, and was witnessed by Charles H. May and the late Frank Hamilton.

Charles H. May is the attorney for the estate.

The estate of the late George C. Isham, of Scioto-twp, who was stricken during Pumpkin show, is left in fee simple to the widow, Mrs. Mabel H. Isham. Of the $12,500 estate, $11,000 is in real estate.

J. R. Hott, Jack Philo and W. E. Hall have been appointed appraisers. The will was written Nov. 26, 1926, and witnessed by J. R. and Kathryn B. Hott, George W. Morrison is the attorney for the estate.

Besides the widow, Mr. Isham is survived by a son, Dean, 21, of Columbus.

SLAYER SATISFIED

WARREN, Nov. 21.—Elmer E. Martin will have his wish.

He will die in the electric chair at Ohio penitentiary next April 26.

The 34-year-old roadhouse proprietor appeared today for sentence before Judge Lynn Griffith of Trumbull county common pleas court, and startled the spectators by asking the court to prevent a new trial, or any action by the supreme court of Governor George White which would save him from the death penalty.

"No pen for me," Martin declared calmly. "I'd rather take it now, because if I got out I'd have to face trial for the Bellefonte jail break and robbery, and that's the Penn's Grove, N. J., payroll job—it would mean jail forever."

FATE OF SALES TAX IN BALANCE AS CRITICS STUDY EACH SECTION

Abducted Philadelphia Night Life 'King'

Notified of the abduction three weeks after it occurred, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the department of justice, has assumed personal charge of the search for William Weiss, above, kidnapped Philadelphia sportsman and so-called night life "king." Weiss, held for $100,000 ransom, is believed to have been abducted by underworld characters.

FIGHTS FOR SCHOOLS

"The schools comprise a state problem," he insisted. "Unless a permanent program for them is assured, I won't vote for the sales tax. It must be that way—no other way."

Bohnert said that he thought such a program would be fair to both the cities and rural communities. Although, in some cases it might give more to rural districts, he said he believed such areas were entitled to a permanent program.

He pointed out that farmers spent most of their money in the cities.

"It is only fair that the rural districts have some return," was the way he expressed it.

First official estimates of how much each county would receive from the sales tax under consideration at the "lame duck" session of the legislature were disclosed today by Carlton Dargusch, chairman of the state tax commission.

$198,123 TO COUNTY

Tabulated on the allocation plan suggested by Governor White in his message, which would give schools and local subdivisions approximately $43,000,000, the chart showed that Pickaway-co would receive $198,123. The county deficit, if any, was unknown by Dargusch.

Madison-co would receive $125,174; Ross $264,031.

FOUR DROWN IN LAKE TRAGEDY

ALPENA, Mich., Nov. 21.—The Canadian freighter, W. C. Franz, carried four members of her crew to their deaths in Lake Huron early today when she was rammed and sunk by the steamer Loomis of the Great Lakes Transit corporation, 30 miles south-east of here.

The Loomis, badly damaged and in grave danger of sinking, was struggling toward Harbor Beach, Mich., with the survivors from the Franz aboard her. The Loomis was accompanied by the steamer Reiss Brothers of Sheboygan, Wis., and coast guards from the Harbor Beach station were putting out to meet the stricken ship.

Reports that the Loomis lost two men could not be confirmed.

The collision occurred in a dense fog about 2:30 a. m. The Loomis was proceeding down Lake Huron, when the Franz, a steel-hulled 3,120-ton coal ship, was enroute northward, Port Colborne, Ont., to Port Arthur, Ont., to pick up a cargo.

At 2:30 the Franz sent out a general SOS, reporting a collision with a ship which was not identified.

"We are sinking rapidly," the message read. "The men are taking to the boats."

Coast guard boats sent out from Middle Island and Thunder Bay stations, but the further word came from the scene of the crash, until the Reiss Brothers arrived in answer to the SOS.

The Reiss reported by radio that the Franz had gone down with four of her crew, and that the Loomis was trying to make port at Harbor Beach.

'Must Aid Schools' Bohnert

County Representative Says Distribution on Population and Tax Duplicates Not Fair To Schools and Rural Sections; County Would Get $198,123.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 21.—Opposition to the sales tax plan if it includes provision for allocation of receipts on the basis of tax duplicates and population was expressed today by Rep. Nathan C. Bohnert, of Pickaway-co.

"It must provide for a permanent schools program or I won't vote for it," said Bohnert, a Democrat.

Bohnert urged enactment of provisions that would guarantee every grade school pupil $15 and every high school student $67.50 for education.

Bill Withstands Early Assault as Amendments Are Voted Down

LEGISLATORS DIFFER

Some Believe Measure Cannot Win Approval

COLUMBUS, Nov. 21.—Surviving the first attack unscathed, the White administration's 3 per cent bracket sales tax bill today again braved the merciless fire of sharp-shooting critics in the Ohio house of representatives.

By tacit agreement the keynote measure of the entire administration "last ditch" tax program went on trial first in the lower house, while the senate marked time.

With Rep. J. Freer Bittinger (D) Ashland, acting as chairman, and the entire lower house membership sitting as a special taxation committee, the sales tax bill was being considered section by section.

ATTACKS HALTED

Three times during deliberations on the first three pages of the 26-page sales tax bill, amendments which state taxing authorities said would have nullified the measure's effect were offered but each time the onslaught proved ineffectual.

It was the old sales tax battle being fought all over again, and the former device which was prior to the present "lame duck" session resulted in its defeat no less than six times in the past.

Leading the storm troops of sales tax opponents was Lucas county's energetic Rep. Tom Q. Carey, who shouted to the rafters that "a sales tax violates every sound fundamental of taxation and is essentially a tax upon the poor."

As Carey arose to offer an amendment which, if accepted, would have emasculated the sales tax measure, he asserted that George V. Sheridan, head of the Ohio Council of Retail Merchants and sponsor of the bracket sales tax, "should be made a member of the 90th General Assembly" because of his activities in behalf of the bill.

Carey then submitted his amendment to exempt all foodstuffs and all wearing apparel from the sales levy. It finally was voted down, 59 to 26, not before precipitating a furious debate.

The amendment had been adopted," said Rep. Lawrence, Cleveland, the Democratic floor leader. "We might as well have folded up the session and returned home."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go!

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salubrious water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Reject a substitute.

LEGAL NOTICE IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS OF PICKAWAY COUNTY, OHIO

No. 7397

The Buckeye State Building and Loan Company, Plaintiff,

L. P. Johnson, et al. Defendants.

The defendants, William A. Conitz and Rachel L. Conitz, husband and wife, each of whose last known place of residence was 311 South Wall Street, Columbus, Ohio, the defendant, Clara Johnson, whose last known place of residence was 75 South Drexel Avenue, Boxley, Ohio, and the defendant, Hannah Johnson Miller, also known as Hannah Johnson, whose last known place of residence was 35 Brunson Avenue, Columbus, Ohio, but each of whose present place of residence is unknown to the plaintiff, and cannot with due diligence be ascertained, will take notice that on or about the 17th day of September, 1934, The Buckeye State Building and Loan Company filed its petition in the Common Pleas Court of Pickaway County, Ohio, being case No. 7397, upon the docket of said Court, against them and others, praying, among other things, for judgment against the defendants, L. P. Johnson, William A. Conitz and Rachel L. Conitz, in the sum of $3945.99, with interest thereon from the date of the promissory note and for the foreclosure of a mortgage to secure the payment of said note, against the following real estate situated in the Township of Scioto, County of Pickaway, in the State of Ohio, and described as follows:

Beginning at a stake northeast corner to Joshua Williams' land; thence south 89 degrees east 103 poles to a black oak; thence south 5 degrees east 140 poles to a stake in the line between Shaw and Fitzgerald; thence south 81 degrees west 25 poles to a stone, southeast corner to John Lane's land; thence south 89 degrees west 80 poles to a stake, northeast corner to said Lane; thence with Lane's line south 81 degrees west 105 poles to a stone in the line of said Joshua Williams' land; thence with Williams' land, north 9 degrees west 60 poles to the place of beginning, containing ninety (90) acres of land, more or less, being a part of Survey No. 1189. Excepting therefrom eleven acres that was transferred on the Tax Duplicate in the Auditor's office of Pickaway County, Ohio, to William Welsh on December 17, 1933, and also eleven acres that was transferred on said Tax Duplicate to Mary J. Wilkins on June 1, 1930, leaving sixty-eight (68) acres, hereinafter included in this description, and alleging that said mortgage is a valid lien against said real estate; that the conditions of said mortgage have been broken by failure of the defendants to make payments on said note according to its terms; that each and all of the defendants have or claim to have some right, title or interest in said real estate; and further praying that said real estate be sold and plaintiff's claim first paid from the proceeds; that each and all of the defendants may be required to set up in said case any right, title or interest which they or any one of them may have, or claim to have, in or to said real estate, or be foreclosed; and that plaintiff may have all other and further relief to which it may be entitled either in law or in equity.

are leaving no doubt that they are prepared to wage determined war against such a restricted program. And they express every confidence that the present political and economic temper of the country is such that they can give the President the legislative fight of his life if he persists in his policy.

That it is entirely likely that he may liberalize his plans was significantly indicated the day following his speech and the sour reaction that it was accorded by the delegates.

Miss Perkins convened a hastily summoned press conference and in her most tutorial manner undertook to explain that the President had not meant to shut the door on old age pensions and other measures that his mind, while undecided was still open.

The Labor Secretary was very positive about her interpretation, revealing unwittingly, during a sharp interrogation, that she had an important hand in the preparation of the President's speech.

SALES TAX

argued that its competition, canned milk, would be taxed as well, and that there was no more reason for favoring milk producers than the producers of any of the other good necessities.

Sales tax sponsors frankly were afraid that if they exempted one essential product it would merely provide an opening wedge for so many exemptions the tax measure would be defeated.

LESS THAN 9 CENTS

Previous to his fight in behalf of milk producers, Rep. Deibel sought, also to avoid to remove the exemption on all sales of less than nine cents. Even old guard sales tax advocates objected to a penny tax on such sales would represent far more than a 3 per cent tax.

A penny tax on a penny newspaper, Rep. Hugh Addison (D) Columbus, pointed out, would be a 100 per cent tax, while on a 5-cent sale it would represent a 20 per cent tax.

With the defeat of this proposition, Rep. George Harter (D) Akron, an anti-sales tax member, submitted an amendment to exempt all sales up to 29 cents from payment of the tax. This, too, was defeated.

Thus far the sales tax measure escaped destructive amendments, but the hardest part of its journey lay ahead. The highly controversial subject of allocation, which anti-sales taxers predicted would result in the bill's defeat, has not yet been reached.

As a temporary proposition, Gov. George White, in his special message to the assembly, suggested that sales tax receipts, an estimated $60,000,000 annually, be allocated back to the counties, after the state took out 10 million for

HURT SMALL COUNTIES

This anti-sales taxers averred, gave the cities all the benefits and would put the smaller counties, their local governments and schools on a starvation diet. Many rural legislators, formerly committed to vote for a sales tax, threatened to vote it down unless an allocation plan more favorable to rural Ohio was worked out.

"As the bill stands now," said Rep. Robert F. Kaser (D) Sidney, "it doesn't stand a chance of passing. We rural members positively will not stand for the so called 50-50 allocation."

Champaign county's Rep. W. P. Van Ness (R) served notice on the Democratic leaders at the very outset of debate on the sales tax that "you're not going to get any more with this or any other bill until you get a school program."

No specific provision for the schools is contained in the governor's latest taxation program. Lacking the basic foundation school program so ardently desired by the school people, it vests in the hands of the 88 county budget commissions complete authority to apportion their county's total receipts among county and local governments and schools.

Better Light... Better Sight

Surveys show not one home in ten is adequately lighted.

Has Your Home Enough Light to Protect EYES?

Don't neglect one of the most important things in your home when you remodel or repair... and that is proper lighting fixtures. Science now tells us that constant reading or working in inadequate light is one of the surest ways to damage eyes. The reason many children become near-sighted is that they study in poor light. And not one modern home in ten provides enough light for effortless seeing without eye strain.

Let our representative call on you and measure the light in your home. There is no obligation on your part for this service.

Modernize Your Home Now With a Federal Housing Loan

IMPROVED HOUSING IS HELP TO HEALTH PTA HEAD STATES

"The Better Housing Program sponsored by the Federal Housing Administration should be understood by every family in America. Once understood, it will be utilized to build better lives, enlarge living quarters, and make places for children to play at home instead of on the streets."

Thus does Mrs. B. F. Longworth, of Chicago, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, view the effects of the National Housing Act.

"The Better Housing Program is a civic movement and should be supported as such," she says. "The house is closely related to the health of the family. Sleeping porches should be a part of every house in this country."

"All the unhealthful, unsanitary living conditions are not found among the poor. Some of the affluent families live in gilded slums insofar as they provide recreation and room enough for their children to grow. They have Queen Anne fronts and Mary Ann backs. These are the people who can build playgrounds and recreation rooms or at least enlarge the living rooms so that the family have a feeling of freedom."

"Our ideal is: Homes where the child may feel free; where he is well fed; where he has room for his own belongings; where he can study in quiet; where the hours of home activities are regular and unhurried and from which he goes every day with a sense of loving care and adventure. Proper material surroundings are essential to realizing this ideal."

NEGLECT TO REPAIR MAKES COST HEAVY

Deterioration and Obsolescence Important point in Maintenance.

While property ownership is a very stable and attractive investment, two serious items must be kept in mind, according to G. J. DeGelleke, director of the Central States Division of the American Institute of Architects. They are:

1. Depreciation, due to the wearing out of the buildings, which reduces their value.

2. Obsolescence, due to buildings not meeting the requirements of the times and therefore not producing reasonable income.

"Neglecting repairs results in an accumulation of expense which is a great deal larger than the cost of repairs as required from time to time," Mr. DeGelleke says. "In some cases it necessitates reconstructing parts of the buildings."

"The condition of buildings have a great effect upon the people who occupy them and when well taken care of, create more healthful conditions, more confidence and contentment, strengthen ideals, and intensify interest in homes. Thus will be developed better citizens physically, mentally and morally."

"People are affected by the condition of the buildings they occupy fully as much as they are by the clothes they wear, their associates and their manner of life."

The National Housing Act, Mr. DeGelleke declared, provides the ways and means for owners of property to save the values of their investments, and while benefiting themselves they also provide work and income for a great body of their fellow men.

Housing Question Box

Q—I have an old house on my hands, substantially built but without modern heating and plumbing. Which is the better course—remodel or rebuild?

A.—It is surprising what can be done with an old house by remodeling if you call in an ingenious architect. But the question of whether the old house is still sound enough for remodeling should be decided by a competent architect or builder.

Q.—Can I refurnish my kitchen completely with a Modernization Loan?

A.—Any kitchen unit which is built-in can be purchased and installed legally with the proceeds of a Modernization Loan. This includes built-in ironing boards, dinettes, flower boxes, cabinets, cupboards, as well as built-in refrigerators and ranges. It does not include tables, chairs, chairs and kitchenware, neither does it include stoves and refrigerators, if detachable.

Q.—My old shingle roof has outlived its usefulness. Do the old shingles have to be torn off before the new ones are put on?

A.—You will actually have a better roof if you let the old shingles remain in place, level them down with an adz or other tool and place the new roof over them. The old shingles provide additional insulation for the house. Any reputable building contractor can advise you further in this matter.

Q.—I have a mortgage on my house and was not able to pay the full amount of principal due this year. Can I get a Modernization Loan to repair my furnace?

A.—Under a recent ruling of the Federal Housing Administration, any bank or other lending institution which does not hold your mortgage can extend you a Modernization Loan, at its discretion. If you apply for this loan to the institution which holds your mortgage and it decides to grant the loan, that institution must write you a letter promising not to foreclose the mortgage during the life of the loan. A built-in boiler or furnace is eligible for a Modernization Loan, but a movable one is not.

Q.—My house is practically weather-tight except around the window frames, and I can't spot the cause of the leakage. What can I do about it?

A.—The wisest course is to call in a reputable contractor, or a master carpenter, who has had extensive experience in such matters. If you make your own examination, here are some items to look into: See that the inside stool or window ledge is nailed down securely and fits snugly at both ends; there may be a crack under it or at either end. CLOTHE HOME IN WINTED OVERCOAT

A new overcoat may be all the old house needs to keep it warm this winter. The comfort, of the home, as well as its appearance, will necessarily improve with the addition of one of the many effective siding materials over the old siding.

Brick, brick veneer, stucco, stone, clapboards, shingles and other products, when applied on top of the old siding, provide additional insulation. Not only is there a new surface to keep the cold out, but a dead-air chamber is formed between the two sidings, and this space is greatly effective in retaining the heat inside and preventing the outside cold from entering. It operates to the contrary in the summer, repelling the heat rays and facilitating the cooling of the rooms inside.

When shingles and clapboards are applied to masonry or stucco, wooden strips are first applied, horizontally for shingles and vertically for clapboards. The strips are placed equal to the weather exposure at which the shingles or clapboards are to be laid.

It is necessary, when overcoat-

parting strips and pulley stiles also fit tightly. Wherever cracks are found, nail the woodwork firmly and fill in remaining cracks with whitelead putty or caulking compound. If seepage continues after these things have been done, it may be stopped by removing the lower sash and ploughing a furrow or groove along the bottom of the lower drain from one side to the other, forming a cavity that will check the flow before it gets inside the window.
